4. Public Comment on Items Not on the Agenda

Ken Brouillette submitted two proposals for Emergency Rule consideration, but they were not received until Thursday and weren't added to the agenda for review. He then introduced his proposals and the reason for the proposals.

Fire Code – Chapter 12 was modified but didn't address energy storage systems as a whole. Webinar provided by Washington State Department of Commerce, attended by other fire departments and Pacific Northwest National Laboratory (PNNL), enlighten how far behind Washington State is with our codes and energy storage systems.

2018 WA State Fire Code Chapter 12– Energy Systems, Reference Standards; NFPA 855-23

2021 WA State Fire Code, Chapter 12, update with the 2024 language.

Stoyan Bumbalov clarified the process by stating the request would be for Off-Cycle Rulemaking if the Council deems this necessary. He also stated that receiving the request on Wednesday wasn't enough time for consideration and Council had previously asked for at least a month to evaluate and consider requests. He then stated this topic will be added to the agenda for the January Council meeting with Staff's input on the request.

Kjell Anderson asked a clarifying question about the scope of Ken Brouillette's request which was answered by Ken Brouillette.

Micah Chappell agreed with the request for the 2018 Code update and Off-Cycle Rulemaking.

Stoyan Bumbalov noted he hasn't had enough time to evaluate the requests. Based on his brief review, the requests don't meet the criteria for an emergency rule. He asked Council to take the time to properly review and evaluate the emergency rule request, before making a decision. He noted that with all emergency and off-cycle rules, it appears that the Council adopts new rules every month. He suggested modifications to the Council's policies and procedures to allow rulemaking every 18 or 12 months as opposed to every month.

Matthew Paiss, PNNL technical advisor, spoke in support of both of Ken Brouillette proposals.

Greg Rogers, Spokane Valley Fire Department, spoke in support of Ken Brouillette proposals.

Stoyan Bumbalov said he would email Ken Brouillette's proposals to the Council members for review and further discussion would occur at the January Council meeting.

Kathleen Petrie, King County, spoke in support of requiring a dedicated branch circuit for EV charging in Section R 309.62 but not in support of the exception.
